Historical Sketch

The Finnish American labor-political movement started with the national awaking, which occurred in Finland in the last half of the nineteenth century. Workers’ clubs were established, which later embraced Marxist ideologies. Once in America, the Finnish immigrant workers, who were mostly unskilled laborers, experienced many economic hardships. In 1890, they organized the first workingman’s society in Brooklyn, New York, which was known as the Imatra Society. By 1906, fifty local clubs formed a national body known as the Finnish Socialist Federation. This amalgam of socialist ideologies grew and by 1914, the membership had grown to over 15,500. Early the Federation gained support especially on the Mesabi Range towns of Minnesota, the mining ranges of Upper Michigan, the factory towns and agricultural villages of the United States' east coast, as well as in the lumber camps, commercial fishing ports and mining towns of western states such as Montana, Washington, Oregon and California.

Socialist organizations offered an alternative secular organization which attempted to provide for the economic and material needs of its members. Early, the socialist Finnish Americans also established three newspapers, the Työmies (Workingman), Raivaaja (Pioneer) and Toveri (Comrade). Adding to this accumulation of material culture in 1907, the Työväen Opisto (the Work People’s College) near Duluth, Minnesota began educating the children of Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) adherents. Additionally, socialist organizations established cooperatives, built recreational camps, organized dramatic groups, athletic associations, festivals and developed choirs and bands.

In 1914-15, the Finnish Socialist Federation split and some locals joined the IWW. Another split occurred in 1919 over communist affiliation. About two thirds joined the communist Workers Party of America as the Finnish Federation of the Workers’ Party in 1921. In 1924, another large split occurred when the Soviet Comintern outlawed language federations in the Workers Party branches. By 1927, Finnish American Communists, who remained loyal to the Soviet international, had regrouped as the Finnish Workers’ Federation, which in the beginning of the 1930s underwent bolshevization. At the same time, many Finnish Americans moved to Russian Karelia in order to build a new socialist society. These two events lead to a decline in active membership in the communist ranks, something the socialists and IWW had experienced for a while.

As the immigrant stream decreased after the 1920s and the following generations of Finnish Americans adapted to the American culture and language, the active membership of Finnish Americans in exclusively “Finn” labor-political groups declined. There are some first generation labor publications which survived into the late 20th century, such as Työmies-Eteenpäin (1998), Industrialisti (1975) and Raivaaja is still published to this day, albeit with a different type of ideology.
Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of different records from various organizations of the labor-political movement. There are several boxes (K.1-5 and K.13-14, about 7 linear feet) with Finnish American labor-political organizations’ and associations’ records, including minutes, finance records, membership books and some material culture. These include records dating from the 1890s until the 1960s from: Crystal Falls, MI Workers Club; I.W.W. Union Branch in Virginia, MN; Rauha Society Branch Lodge No. 4 of American Finnish Labor Association, Ironwood, MI; Workers Club of Iron River, MI; Agitation Committee of Upper Michigan; Supporters of Industrialisti in Iron River, MI; Iron County League of Finnish Voters, Crystal Falls, MI; Toivola Peoples Hall Association, Toivola MI; Finnish Club (National Finnish Socialist Organization), Munising, MI; Toivola’s Workers’ Society, Toivola MI; Finnish Workers’ Society of De Kalb, IL. The collection from Red Lodge, MT (K.16) consists of a collection of play bills from 1925-1941.

The collection of Finnish Workers Federation plays and role manuscripts (K.6-10, about 5.5 linear feet) includes 92 titles (of which 36 are complete plays), mostly of Finnish origin, but there are also some Finnish American pieces and translated German and Russian works. Additionally, music scores from the Finnish Workers Group include some 224 pieces of music.

The Work People’s College series (K.11) from 1917-1941 includes minutes and financial reports, a drama catalog, a semester report, some notes on the history of the WPC as well as some correspondence. The Work People’s College was founded in 1903 as the Finnish People's College and Theological Seminary and renamed in 1907 when the focus shifted to socialism and worker education. By 1921 Work People's College was closely identified with the Industrial Workers of the World until its final year of operation in 1941.

The Communist Party series (K.12) consists of many newspaper clippings, press releases, and some correspondence from 1938-1953. There are several articles and an FBI report about Gus Hall, a Finnish American who was a leader of the Communist Party and its four-time US presidential candidate. He was indicted under the Smith Act on charges of conspiracy to overthrow the U.S. government in 1948. Hall spent eight years in Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary.

The Työmies Society and Finnish-American Reporter series (K.15a-K.15f, about 6.5 linear feet) dating from the 1910s to the 1990s includes many financial records and minutes, certificates of membership for various societies, legal documents, correspondence, bills and invoices, applications for positions and internships, as well as issues and manuscripts of Työmies-Eteenpäin. There is also a folder on the establishment of a bail fund for Knut Heikkinen, who was an editor of Työmies-Eteenpäin and was arrested in 1949 and rearrested in 1950 for past membership in the Communist Party. On October 12, 1953, Heikkinen was arrested for failure to deport himself. He was convicted to a ten year sentence, but the decision was overturned by the Supreme Court in 1958, and Heikkinen was exonerated.
